Local Japanese have become interested in the proposition to visit Laysan and Johnson island for the purpose of erecting a small plant for the canning of lobsters. The product, it is predicted, would become a staple food with a large Oriental population. The countless horde of rabbits are the progeny from several pair of animals taken to Laysan years ago by Schlemmer. Laysan, Johnson and Lysiansky islands are the home and resting place for immense numbers of sea birds. The ground is literally covered with eggs.
